Different agricultural tools are very diverse. Some of these tools are simple and some have a complex structure and design. In the following, we examine different types of agricultural tools:

Tools: These tools are used by the user manually. Like a grafting knife.

Non-motorized devices: These devices are relatively light and may be carried by the user or dragged or pushed on the ground during operation. such as a non-motorized hand-held lawnmower or roller-back sprayer.

Motorized devices: The power required for the moving parts of these devices is provided by a combustion or electric engine and they can be divided into three categories:

- Manual (like a motorized pruner)
- back (motorized back sprayer)
- wheeled (disc lawn mower)
- Tractor tools: These tools are used by the tractor and may be connected to the transmission axis of the tractor and move from it in addition to providing traction force from the tractor. Such as: the sprayer behind the tractor
- Self-driving machines: these machines have a drive motor that, while providing the required power for moving parts, also gives power to the wheels to move the device, such as: self-driving lawn mowers
- Equipment: These devices are usually installed temporarily or permanently in different departments and may include moving parts or all of its parts are fixed, such as coolers.
